Entries open today for the 14th Annual Business Day BASA (Business and Arts South Africa) Awards, supported by Anglo American, and this year there are two exciting new categories that substantially broaden the reach of South Africa's most prestigious business and arts award event.

The first is the Arts and Environment Award. It will reward business support of arts and culture projects which contribute towards the sustainability of the environment.

According to BASA CEO Michelle Constant: "The issue of sustainability is a growing one, and if the arts can be used to drive change in the individual user and larger corporates, it means a more holistic approach to the world around us."

The second addition - Diplomacy in the Arts - will pay tribute to a Foreign Mission which contributes to the development and preservation of the arts in South Africa, as well as the continued prioritisation of cultural diplomacy between South Africa and the international community. This Award is made at the discretion of the BASA Chairman and the judging panel.

The BASA Awards recognise and encourage excellence and innovation in the field of business support for the arts. Imaginative, innovative and cost-effective partnerships between business and the arts are highlighted, demonstrating the potential for synergy, the window of mutual opportunity and the far reaching benefits for business, for the arts, and for all South Africans.

In total, the awards feature 15 categories (see list below) with 12 of these being open for general entry. They cover a wide range of creative mediums with architecture joining other disciplines such as design, visual arts, dance, theatre, physical performance, fashion and music in being eligible for recognition.

"The Business Day/BASA Awards are easily the most rewarding partnership this newspaper has with anyone. The awards bring us close to our community and they encourage the individual elements of our community to get close to theirs. We're very proud of the awards and our association with them. And we're especially proud of what South African companies, big and small, are able to do to help promote talent and creativity in the communities around them. BASA night is always a big night in South Africa," says Business Day editor, Peter Bruce.

"Supporting the development of arts and culture in host-communities around the world is one of the ways in which Anglo American drives social development in those same communities, delivering on the company's promise of being a Partner of Choice. Our involvement in the Business Day BASA Awards is part of a vision that sees arts as an indispensable part of South Africa's progress towards being a nation which embraces diversity across all platforms," says Pranill Ramchander, Head of Corporate Communication and Branding, Anglo American SA.
