There is no doubt that Covid-19 resulted in the acceleration of digital technology across sectors both in SA and abroad. One of the significant digital solutions for shopping during hard-lockdown has been the e-commerce platforms and many physical retailers improving their e-commerce capabilities to cater for consumers.

According to ecommerceBD website, South Africa is the 37th largest market for eCommerce with revenue estimated at $4bn in 2020. The emergence of new markets within the e-commerce ecosystem is expected to do well and existing markets continue to thrive. Improving online shopping infrastructure for consumers create a lucrative environment for e-commerce.

How can marketers and advertisers leverage the data on consumer insights, shopper interests, attitudes and the overall customer journey derived from e-commerce? Would converting the offline shopper to online make the jobs of marketers and advertisers easier or does this to consumers differ?

Join Amasa Ignite Forum as we host industry representatives to unpack some of the facts behind this topic with panellist:
