

Winner of APO invitation to AfricaCom 2015 announced

APO (African Press Organization) has announced that Technology Staff Writer Lilian Murugi Mutegi (@MurugiMutegi) from Kenya has won APO's invitation to attend AfricaCom 2015, the biggest and best tech event in Africa, to be held in Cape Town, South Africa, on 17-19 November 2015.

APO will offer transport, accommodation and per-diems for Mutegi to travel to Cape Town and cover the entire event.

"APO congratulates Lilian and is proud to offer this opportunity to an experienced technology journalist. APO offers invitations each year to major African events as part of our commitment to supporting journalism in Africa and creating opportunities for journalists to learn and grow across Africa," says Nicolas Pompigne-Mognard, Founder and CEO of APO.

A trained journalist at the Kenya Institute of Mass Communication having specialized in Print Media, Lilian Murugi Mutegi works with CIO East Africa (www.cio.co.ke) as a Technology Staff Writer, developing content for both CIO East Africa Online platform and CIO East Africa magazine, a leading technology magazine in East Africa, covering technology trends across Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda and Rwanda.

Prior to that, she worked at the Kenya Institute of Curriculum Development under their Corporate Communications Office and at Kenya News Agency. When working as a freelance journalist, she sent her contributions to major newspapers like The Daily Nation, The Standard, The People Daily and The Star newspapers.

More information about AfricaCom 2015, visit <http://africa.comworldseries.com>